English Exercises > Modals Exercises Click here for all exercises on modal verbs we can use have to + infinitive, must + infinitive and should + infinitive to express obligation (something you must do). PresentPositiveNegative must/don't need strong obligation (possibly from outside) Children must go to school. (sometimes) no obligation I don't have to work on Sundays. You don't have to eat something you don't like. must / mustn't strong obligation (possibly based on the speaker's opinion) negative obligation should / should not mild obligation or advice You should save some money. mild negative obligation or advice You should not smoke as much. Be careful with the difference between must not and do not have to! May not mean that it is not allowed, or it is a bad idea: You may not eat as much chocolate, you will be sick Do not mean that you do not have to do anything, but it is good if you want to do it: I do not get up early on the weekend (of course, if I want to get up early, that's fine, but I can stay in bed if I want to). PastPositiveNegative had to/didn't need obligation in the past, I had to wear a school uniform when I was a kid. No obligation in the past We didn't have to go to school on Saturdays. must * changes in 'had to'- should have + pp / should not have + pp a previous action that did not happen: the advice / regret is too late You should have gone to bed earlier, now you have missed the train. a previous action that didn't happen: advice/regret is too late you shouldn't have taken that job., that was a bad idea. * Remember must have done is a modal verb of deduction or speculation, not obligation in the past. For example: Julie must have left. Her coat isn't here. See modals of probability for more information. Need more practice? Get more Perfect English Grammar with our courses.
